GASOLIN'

Anders Østergaard, Denmark, 2006

87 min. | DK/Documentary | Portrait films

Denmark's undisputed greatest rock band ever, Gasolin' was an uncommonly close-knit collective who spent almost all their waking hours over nine years together, with all the familiarity and friction that entailed. From the outset they were wildly ambitious and even when things failed most miserably, such as the time they tried to conquer America, they never stopped believing anything was possible. Reuniting the band for the first time since their acrimonious break-up 28 years ago, Anders Østergaard's documentary is a portrait of an era, the 1970s, and four distinct characters who defined it.
