

Guidelines for DFI's Embassy Film Package 2020

1. The films can be used for screenings at EU film festivals, film clubs, smaller film festivals and similar events where the representations are involved. The films cannot be used for TV, VOD or similar screenings.
2. The screenings should be non-commercial in the sense that only a token fee covering the expenses related to a screening is allowed.
3. The format of the films is Blu-ray and they can be played in the original Danish version or with English subtitles. Most titles have other additional language versions (see page 2).
4. DFI has prepared an overview of which countries the films have been sold to. The lists are available to download on the link below (under FILMPACKAGE2020). If a film has been sold to a country that the representation covers then the representation must negotiate the terms for the screening with the local distributor. A film can get sold after the lists are made available so if a film doesn't appear to have a local distributor then the representation must check with the film's international sales agent whether it has been sold in the meantime (see paragraph 9).

Dialogue lists for the films are also available via the download link. Stills and other materials for the films can also be found here as well as on the films' fact sheets which you can find on the links below.

5. Please be aware of the risk of piracy when handling the Blu-rays.
6. The films should not be returned to DFI. The representations can keep the films and are allowed to use them after 2020.
7. It is not possible for the representations to require other films or other formats through DFI than those available in the Blu-ray film package.
8. If the representations wish to screen, newer titles they can try to contact the local distributors.
9. If there is no local distributor in your country, contact the film's international sales agent. This information is available on the film's information page at DFI's website and on the back of the Blu-ray covers. This also applies to previous years' packages.
10. The representations and their partners shall include DFI's English logo in press materials, ads, posters etc. DFI's English logo can be downloaded from: <https://www.dfi.dk/presserum/logoer>
